OTHER – THERESA DANIELLO GRAY

Theresa Daniello Gray from Auburn Township explained that she works on behalf of an organization, sanctioned by the American Medical Association, American Nursing Association and recognized by the Veterans Administration to provide continuing medical education to doctors and nurses about endocannabinoid system – a biological system that was discovered in 1988 and in the late 90's it was discovered that cannabinoid receptors exist in our bodies and brains. The organization is self-funded – all volunteer, because they wish to maintain the integrity of the science. Ms. Gray hopes to work with Cleveland Clinic and Case Western to bring this training to our doctors. Mr. Gray explained that this biological system is self-regulatory, using the example that if someone uses cannabis, the biological system makes you feel hungry, adding that the theory is that they feel that the addiction is connected to the endocannabinoid system, so if they can control the system, they might be able to control addiction, along with other diseases and disorders like being overweight or diabetes. Ms. Gray continued by explaining that for thousands of years the human species ate the hemp plant and in the 30's it was taken out of our diet, now we can't eat it, the question is how has our body since evolved and changed. Ms. Gray also works with "momsunited to end the war on drugs", who are moms around the nation who have different passions and interests. Ms. Gray noted that the founder comes from a similar community to ours whose children are addicted to heroin and are in and out of rehab. What has been noted is that the harm to families from addiction by putting people in prison is that the person might end up clean, but now has a felony on the record that then affects the rest of the family. Ms. Gray invited the Board to a conference from the Drug Policy Alliance being held in Denver from October 23 to October 26th. This Alliance is funded by Sir Richard Branson and George Soros among others and they are studying drug addiction and opiate problems across the world. Ms. Gray stated that she may not agree with everything, such as the Law Enforcement Against Prohibition group, who believes in legalizing marijuana. Ms. Gray expressed that she personally has a back problem and with all five of her children was told that taking pain meds while breastfeeding would not harm her children, following which she has learned that by doing that she had exposed her children to opiates.

Ms. Gray stated that the hemp plant was eaten for years and then removed it from our diets, and therefore we are not getting the balance that might be there if we continued to have hemp in our diets versus eating a corn-based diet. Ms. Gray stated that hemp is grown wild, with leaves and buds, noting that the stems are what is used to be ground down into flour, along with paper, rope, and other things. Only 8 states are allowed to grow hemp and import it in from Canada, noting that there is no THC, only cannabinoids. The only hemp plant that has medicinal properties is the female plant; referencing marijuana and that the myth that it can be grown everywhere. Ms. Gray noted that it can't be, that it must be grown in a an enclosed area and that hemp falls into that same category.

Local resident Diane Jones inquired what "THC" was and what it stands for and inquired about Dr. Andrew Whiles, to which Ms. Gray referenced Ms. Jones to a website called patients out of time, where you can hear Dr. Whiles speak about the endocannabinoid system. THC is part of the female cannabis plant that has not been exposed to the male plant that provides a psychotropic effect. There are CBD's and THC's; the CBD's do not have the psychotropic effects, but instead act to reduce inflammation, mentioning Dr. Gary Wink from Ohio State University and a study about Alzheimer's patients that used cannabis in the late 60s and early 70s who appear to be getting the disease at half the rate of those that did not. Commissioner Samide inquired about those with allergies who begin taking local honey as a way to build resistance, and if that would be similar to the hemp in the body. Ms. Gray stated that she didn't have the answer and that was why she was pushing for the Cleveland Clinic to do the studies. Ms. Gray stated that under O.R.C. 4112, the civil rights commission, the disabled are defined, and those individuals are only allowed a highly lethal and addictive drugs and are not allowed a non-lethal herb to help them, and that is a violation of civil rights.

Harm reduction is what the group wants to do, as there is an opiate crisis in not only Ohio but across the nation, and this is coming here from Afghanistan. Ms. Gray stated that when she was on the medications her brain was telling her to get them, adding that those were prescribed to her and she was picking them up from the pharmacy, but if she wasn't she would have been doing other things as a way to get them.

Local resident Tom Jones inquired if it was possible that medical marijuana could be produced in a way that would not produce a high and not be addictive, to which Ms. Gray stated yes, again that it is about the endocannabinoid system, continuing to explain that this is possible if you have high CBD or no THC.

There was discussion about her personal treatment now for her back pain. Ms. Gray explained to the Board the results of cannibus oil that is being used to treat Crohns patients, diabetic ulcers, and tumors and that currently you can only get it in Colorado.
